

---

Creditor Protection for Doctors

Posted by Samantha - 2008/05/01 12:02

---

Physician clients want to know how their business entities should be setup so to protect themselves from frivolous claims. I dont do creditor protection work, so i am looking for advice in the forums. Recommendations?

=====

Re:Creditor Protection for Doctors

Posted by norton - 2008/05/01 13:00

---

Their structure should likely be set up as a PC or professional corporation, just make sure they file the S-Corp election for tax purposes. The PC should provide them with the necessary protection they are looking for. If its a larger practice, 70 plus, consider the PLLC business entity, more flexible to add additional members (Professional Limited Liability Company).

=====