

---

Value of CPA Attorney

Posted by cpa - 2008/03/01 15:46

---

Will I have more value being a CPA after I finish law school than someone with a general business degree

=====

Re:Value of CPA Attorney

Posted by steve - 2008/03/01 17:29

---

I can speak from experience, that a CPA license combo'd with a law license can be a very powerful combination (assuming you have requisite CPA experience to back the law license).

In most states, in order to get a CPA license, you have to have CPA experience. What state and what area of accounting/tax/audit do you have experience or interest in?

=====

Re:Value of CPA Attorney

Posted by cpa - 2008/03/01 20:42

---

Licensed in the State of Illinois with two years audit experience with PricewaterhouseCoopers

=====

Re:Value of CPA Attorney

Posted by steve - 2008/03/01 21:08

---

audit experience is great for a CPA firm. If you want to work at a law firm I would get some tax experience in M&A, tax controversy, estate and gift, or state and local tax. These areas of law are profit centers for law firms. What would you like to do?

=====

Re:Value of CPA Attorney

Posted by Lex - 2008/03/17 23:49

---

JD CPA with M&A experience is where the $ is!

=====

Re:Value of CPA Attorney

Posted by cc4357 - 2008/06/16 13:14

---

Can you sit for the CPA exam if you have a business degree? Is it important for tax law?

=====