
Motorcycle Accident

Posted by FGurin - 2009/01/06 07:37

This past September I was involved in a major motorcycle accident in which my leg was broken and my foot was crushed. The police report collaborated with eyewitness reports stated that the other party was at fault and in violation of traffic codes. What happened is the driver crossed double solid yellow lines of the car pool lane without looking, causing me to try and make evasive maneuvers that ended with me slamming into the rear of her vehicle with the right side of my bike and flying about 30 feet in front of her vehicle with a broken leg and crushed foot.

It turns out that the drivers policy is basic liability 15/30/5. It also appears that the driver may have no assets. I am wondering if there are any lawyers that have some advice for me or that might be interested in my case. Should I accept the policy limits of 15k? My hospital bills are over 400k, but I am covered by insurance. Only problem is, I dont know if I will ever be able to walk normal or be involved in sports again, or even walk without pain. 15k does not seem like enough to compensate for my lost wages and pain and suffering.

Recommendation appreciated

=====

Re:Motorcycle Accident

Posted by Hellava - 2009/01/07 23:41

Do you have UIM (under-insured motorist) coverage on your motorcycle policy?

=====