
no scholarship?

Posted by jbg - 2010/01/26 21:06

if I didn't get a scholarship package along with the acceptance letter, does that mean that I am pretty much out of running for merit aid? or is there a separate letter for it?

=====

Re:no scholarship?

Posted by Tia A. - 2010/01/28 21:47

The law school may not be offering a tuition waiver, but you may qualify for other merit or gender based scholarships. I would contact the law school and ask them if you qualify. Also check with the financial aid department for opportunities and the net.

=====

Re:no scholarship?

Posted by jbg - 2010/02/02 16:24

I called the law school and they are not offering and tuition assistance, but i can apply for grants and federal loans. I already have 77,000 in student loans from UG. So, to add another 150,000 frightens me. I was happy to get into LS, now i'm scared. Not sure what i will do.

=====

Re:no scholarship?

Posted by Tia A. - 2010/02/04 22:28

You are smart to be considering the amount of debt you are taking on as your income will be limited unless you graduate top of your class at a top law school. Where are you going? Which law school?

=====

Re:no scholarship?

Posted by J. Cochran - 2010/02/07 21:34

The link below displays a list of scholarship for law students. Its where i obtained information for my scholarship.

<http://oedb.org/scholarship/law-school>

=====