
ideal month to take the LSAT

Posted by Kera - 2011/02/03 22:36

Is there an "ideal" month in which to take the LSAT? I'm assuming that the answer will discuss a law school cycle. I just dont know if there is a common cycle for law schools. I have search the net but couldnt find it. Since some schools admit all year long as they offer 1st yr courses all year, i was just wondering if there was a prefered LSAT exam to take which will increase my chances of getting an acceptance to a T-14 school.

=====

Re:ideal month to take the LSAT

Posted by adivi - 2011/02/09 23:58

I've never hear of a certain testing period (i.e. month) in which scores were higher than other periods. I think that all LSAT scores are scaled and in-line with other administered LSAT exams.

=====

Re:ideal month to take the LSAT

Posted by jpol - 2011/02/16 23:20

i think scores are consistent each exam period. In addition, all exams are curved; which reduces the need to shop for testing periods.

=====

Re:ideal month to take the LSAT

Posted by adivi - 2011/03/24 23:43

I heard someone today ask the same question. Maybe people attribute the size of the group taking the LSAT which lower scores (more competition)

=====